

ALISON JEAN BAKER – Actress

Alison Jean Baker is an actress, writer and playwright. Emerging from an art background she went on to become a recipient of the Best Actress Award from The Stage for Acting Excellence at the Edinburgh Fringe Festival for her performance in 'The Glace Bay Miner's Museum', an award that she shared with Siobhan Redmond as at the time the judges refused to split the prize between 'The performance of Redmond's career and Baker's sensational debut'. Since then she has performed in 'The Devils' at the Union Theatre, 'The Six Wives of Timothy Leary' at the Riverside Studios and in 'Dancing at Lughnasa' at the Old Vic. She has studied with Theatre de Complicite, Shared Experience, Peta Lily and Linda Kerr Scott. Throughout her acting career she has continued to write. She divides her time between London and Berlin.
